$98 Million ADB Loan For Governments Building India's Clean Plant Programme

The Manila-based Asian Development Bank (ADB) will provide a $98 million loan to the government of India to support its Building India's Clean Plant Programme.

The Indian government's Clean Plant Programme aims to improve horticulture crop farmers' access to certified disease-free planting materials across India.

This initiative is expected to improve the long-term yields, quality, and climate resilience of horticulture crops in India. This will improve farmers' incomes and boost the horticulture sector in the country.

The Government of India and the ADB representative in India signed an agreement for this purpose on 29 November 2024 in New Delhi.

The ADB loan will start the central government's Building India's Clean Plant Programme.

The Union Ministry of Agriculture and Farmers Welfare will implement the Building India's Clean Plant Programme through the National Horticulture Board and the Indian Council of Agricultural Research.

The Programme aims to enhance plant management in the country by providing horticulture farmers with access to certified disease-free planting materials.

The loan amount will be used to target crops like almonds, apples, avocados, berries, citrus, grapes, guava, litchi, mango, pomegranate, and walnuts.

The government will establish dedicated clean plant centres to maintain disease-free foundation materials that accredited nurseries will later propagate.

The government will provide licences to private and public nurseries to whom the dedicated clean plant centres will supply the disease-free foundation materials.
