United Kingdom Agrees to Hand over the Chagos Islands

The United Kingdom and Mauritius have reached an agreement under which the United Kingdom will return the Chagos Islands and the atoll of Diego Garcia to Mauritius. This agreement marks the end of British colonialism on the African continent.

The agreement was announced in a joint statement issued by the United Kingdom Prime Minister Keir Starmer and Mauritius Prime Minister Pravind Jugnauth on 3 October 2024.

Under the agreement, the natives displaced from the Chagos Islands will have the right to return and settle on the Chagos Islands, except Diego Garcia.

The United Kingdom will retain a 99-year lease of the Diego Garcia islands, where an important United States Military base is located.

The island, part of Mauritius, was occupied by the United Kingdom in 1810.

Before giving independence to Mauritius in 1968, the United Kingdom separated the Chagos archipelago from Mauritius and made it a British Indian Ocean Territory.

The main reason the United Kingdom refused to hand over the Chagos archipelago to Mauritius is the Diego Garcia atoll's military significance.
